Description
Flowerhorn cichlids are ornamental aquarium fish noted for their vivid colors and the distinctively shaped heads for which they are named.
Flowerhorn cichlids are hybrid Central American cichlids, also known as Louhan in Asia. One or more of the original parent species was Amphilophus trimaculatus, and that's the species that they most closely resemble, and behave like. They are tropical freshwater fish that originated in fish farms in South East Asia, and its in Asia that they are most popular.
Flowerhorns are very aggressive and territorial, so most are kept alone. That means one tank one fish.

Discover the stunning beauty of our high-grade Flowerhorn Cichlids – known for their vivid colors, prominent head humps (kok), and interactive personality.
