Description

The Clown Knifefish is a very popular knifefish. But its also a favorite because it is extremely attractive. Hobbyists like them because they usually have a pattern of large spots, but this can be quite variable and it seems that no two Clown Knifefish are exactly alike.

This Spotted Featherback Fish inhabit lakes, swamps, and the moving backwaters waters of medium to large rivers. Young fish occur in schools among aquatic plants and submerged roots. Adults tend to be loaners, commonly found near shore in areas with overhanging vegetation or docks. They utilize air to survive in warm, stagnant waters with little oxygen.
